Welcome

Hello and welcome to Trinity Mandalas. I hope you will love making these mandalas, I know I enjoyed designing them.

Have you ever been challenged to do something, and then were amazed at what you did? This is what happened to me with these mandalas. Dedri from Look at what I made set me a challenge, she said take 10 random colors and design a mandala. She also said that if I work more than 4 rounds without having to chart it out or frog, that I should rip those rounds back and start again. She also told me to change colors every round, or two rounds max, to allow for maximum freedom in color placement.

Quite a challenge, and the result is the 3 mandalas you find in this pattern. Dedri gave me a lot of feedback during the design process and I am most grateful to her for her help.

The pattern is divided into 3 parts; in part 1 you make the small mandala, in part 2 you grow the small mandala to become the medium mandala, and in part 3 you grow the medium mandala to become the large mandala. I have designed these 3 mandalas to be hung together, but if you want to make just one in any of the 3 sizes you are most welcome.

I have made 3 video tutorials to help you every step of the way. I hope the videos make it possible for everyone to make these mandalas.

I would love to see your work. Feel free to tag me on Instagram, or use #itsallinanutshell to help me find it. You can also join my Facebook group to show your work.

With love,

Esther

Gauge

The mandalas are designed to be approximately 10% smaller than the rings they go into. This means the small mandala is 14cm before it goes into the 15cm ring, the medium mandala is 27cm before it goes into the 30cm ring, and the large mandala is 45cm before it goes into the 50cm ring. The 10% difference is important, because the mandalas need to be stretched out when placed in the ring to ensure that they can support their own weight. If they are too large, they will be floppy and droopy when placed in the rings.

If you find that your mandalas are too big, you are most likely lifting your stitches higher than I am. I suggest you look at THIS VIDEO about the golden loop. If you are a so-called lifter, your stitches will be higher than average, and going down a hook size will not make any difference. I suggest that you try to pull your yarn back to make your stitches shorter.

Notes

When working the mandalas I use two ways of closing a round, either with a slip stitch or with an invisible join. You are welcome to replace all slip stitch joins with an invisible join. However, DO NOT replace an invisible join with a slip stitch join because then the next round will be less pretty.

I start each round with a standing stitch. Feel free to replace any standing stitch with the corresponding number of chain stitches, for example a double crochet with ch3.

Color J (Black) is only used to connect the mandalas to the rings.

The pattern is designed to be made with a 50cm ring for the large mandala. 50cm is approximately 19" or 20", depending on how you convert. Both are fine to use with this pattern. If you have an 18" ring, it is best to stop at Round 33, when your mandala is about 40cm (16"), and then finish the mandala by joining it to the ring.

Finishing medium mandala

Work away all yarn tails on both mandalas. The two mandalas are now approximately 27cm. Attach the medium mandala (the second colorway) to the medium, 30cm ring with Color J (Black). Leave the other final mandala for the moment, we will make it bigger in part 3.

To finish the medium mandala, attach Color J (Black) with a standing bpsc around any sc AND the 30cm ring. Work a bpsc around each sc AND the ring. Close with an invisible join on the first st.

[192 bpsc]

Work an optional hanging chain to hang the mandala. Attach Color J (Black) with a slip st in any st, chain the number of sts needed to get the required length, close the loop with a slip st in the same st as in which the yarn is attached. Tie a knot between the two yarn tails to secure the loop. Work away the yarn tails.
